TESTING THE WATERS

Grim number. The death of a 2-year-old girl in a Prospect Park lake over the Fourth of July holiday is the fifth drowning that has taken place in New York City in the last three weeks.

Making waves. Officials and water safety groups aim to educate residents — especially those who haven't taken swimming lessons — on the perils of the city's waterways. PAGE 02

Funeral set for NYC firefighter

Lt. Gordon Ambelas, a firefighter who died Saturday, will be remembered at a wake on Tuesday and Wednesday from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. at the Casey McCallum Rice Funeral Home on Staten Island.

The funeral procession will take place at 11 a.m. Thursday at St. Clare's Church on Staten Island.

The 40-year-old lieutenant rushed into a burning high-rise in Williamsburg, Brooklyn, on July 5. The fire trapped him in a room, where he succumbed to the flames and smoke. He is survived by his wife, Nanette, and two young daughters.

Cops fire at carjacking suspect on Verrazano toll plaza

Police are looking for a suspected carjacker who allegedly sped past transit cops firing at him near the Verrazano-Narrows Bridge toll plaza early on Monday.

Tyree Brown, 25, allegedly hijacked a black 2006 Hummer at gunpoint just after 6 a.m. Sunday on Staten Island, police said. Transit officers spotted the car in the toll plaza around 1:15 a.m., officials said.

The car was stopped and officers fired several shots when Brown sped through the toll plaza, officials said. Brown allegedly abandoned the SUV at Narrows Road North and Steuben Street.

"This individual should be considered armed and dangerous," Chief of Detectives Robert Boyce said.

Recent drownings spark swimming safety push

Safety. Five people have drowned in in the last three weeks in NYC.

Saturday's drowning death of a toddler in Brooklyn's Prospect Park has sparked an effort to improve water safety in the city.

Family members of 2-year-old Ruhshona Kurbonova stood by Brooklyn Borough President Eric Adams at Grand Army Plaza on Monday, not far from where the girl's body was found after she wandered away from her relatives.

Dilshod Isakov, Ruhshona's father, spoke through a translator to thank officials for spreading the message of water safety on behalf of his family, saying: "They're very sad and don't want it to happen again."

Part of driving down water-related deaths, Adams said, is education. In Brooklyn, leaders will visit waterfronts to offer safety tips and educate visitors.

He pointed to four other recent drownings as evidence of the need: On June 26, a 21-year-old Williamsburg resident dove in to the East River and was swept away; two Bronx teens died after diving into the Bronx River on June 20; and one day earlier, a man, 29, died after jumping off a Coney Island pier.

The city offers swimming classes and other programs to teach about water safety. To the left, Dilshod Isakov, father of 2-year-old Ruhshona Kurbonova who drowned in Prospect Park, talks with city officials. / GETTY IMAGES, BESS ADLER, METRO

There were 17 drowning deaths in 2012, according to the Health Department.

That's down from 2011's 25 deaths.

Lives lost

"When you look at the number of people who are losing their lives," he said, "the five people who lost their lives in the last three weeks — all of them were under the age of 30." Eric Adams

City officials highlighted the importance of swimming classes. The Parks Department offers "Learn to Swim" classes free for all ages at pools in the city

"The frustrating thing about all of is this that 98 percent of all drowning deaths are not necessary," said Shawn Slevin, founder of the Swim Strong Foundation, a nonprofit that offers scholarships for lessons for families below certain income levels.

Slevin said he hopes to work with the Department of Education to put water safety into its outreach.

"No family should have to go through what you did," Slevin said to Isakov.

Cops take aim at summer violence

The NYPD is going "all out" to combat summer violence.

As part of the Summer All Out program, about 313 police were temporarily placed on patrol this month and sent to 15 precincts and housing police service areas with the highest volume of shootings, officials said Monday.

There will be also another 25 to 30 impact officers deployed citywide every day this summer, Chief of Department Philip Banks said.

Police / GETTY IMAGES

"The result is to have an impact on street conditions, specifically shootings," Banks said.

Shooting incidents are up about 9 percent since 2013, from 514 to 562 year to date through Sunday. Police Commissioner Bill Bratton said shootings may inch up some years, but that the city is experiencing a decrease in crime.

"We've had years where homicides went up, years past where shootings went up," Bratton said, "We addressed it, the next year it went down."

By the numbers

There have been 562 shootins so far this year as of Sunday, a 9 percent increase from 2013.

The new officers will temporarily leave desk jobs and special assignments, officials said.

Instead of reassigning officers, City Council members had supported adding 1,000 cops to the force. The bid failed.

"I could always use more cops, but if the budget doesn't support it, the budget doesn't support it," Bratton said. ANNA SANDERS

Transportation. Uber lowers prices in NYC

Uber, the car-sharing service that lets people order transportation via a smartphone, is temporarily cutting fares on its taxi-like option to step up competition with New York City cab services.

The startup reduced fares by 20 percent in New York for its UberX service, making it cheaper than a city taxi, the company said Monday. An UberX ride from New York's Grand Central to the Financial District would cost $22 under the new fares, compared with $24 for a city taxi, Uber said. The lower prices will be in place for a limited time.

"New York is Uber's biggest market, and we're growing fast, but we always hear, 'I like Uber, it's convenient, but a taxi is still the best deal,'" said Josh Mohrer, Uber's general manager for New York. "It's always been a goal of ours to be cheaper than taxis." BLOOMBERG

Under scrutiny

Uber has faced regulatory hurdles around safety concerns and protests by taxi drivers' lobbies in the U.S. and abroad.

- Traditional cab drivers worldwide say they are bound by rules that don't apply to Uber, putting them at a disadvantage.

Gun violence

Man opens fire on stoop

Police are on the lookout for a man who pulled out a firearm and shot a man in front of a Brooklyn apartment Sunday.

Investigators said the unidentified suspect approached a brownstone on MacDonough Street at 1 a.m. when his 25-year-old victim was sitting on the building's steps. The video then shows the suspect pulling out a handgun and firing multiple times before running from the scene.

Police said the victim remained in stable but critical condition Monday. CHESTER JESUS SORIA

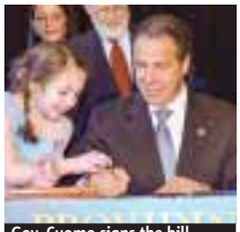
Legalize it. Gov. Cuomo signs medical marijuana into state law

Gov. Andrew Cuomo made New York the 23rd state to legalize medical marijuana on Monday when he signed the bill into law, calling it the country's smartest approach to the issue so far.

"It is complicated and it required a nuanced approach," Cuomo said at the New York Academy of Medicine on the Upper East Side.

That balance includes a waiting period of 18 months before the program can go live.

The earliest New Yorkers might see the law go into effect is January 2016, at which time patients with illnesses such as cancer, HIV/AIDS, epilepsy, multiple sclerosis and Parkinson's disease can seek prescriptions from licensed doctors who undergo specialized training.



Gov. Cuomo signs the bill.
OFFICE OF THE GOVERNOR

Visit Metro.us to read about how the U.S. capital may legalize marijuana.

The medication will only be available through non-smoking delivery systems, such as oils, edibles and vaporizers, and will be available from 20 sanctioned dispensaries.

Man jailed for rape revealed in college essay

A Brooklyn man was sentenced to 18 years in prison on Monday for raping a female relative, who revealed the abuse in a college application essay.

Albert Tarrats, 62, appeared in State Supreme Court where he denied the claim. Tarrats was arrested in 2012 after the young woman, now 18, wrote to an admissions panel that she had been raped when she was 8 years old.

E-cigarette researchers count puffs

Risk assessment. The FDA is hoping the studies reveal the potential health impact of "vaping."

One team of researchers assessing the risks of electronic cigarettes is counting the puffs taken by volunteer "vapers." Another team will comb Facebook for posts on how people are tinkering with e-cigarettes to make the devices deliver extra nicotine. A third is building a virtual convenience store for 13- to 17-year-olds, measuring how e-cigarette displays and pricing influence whether minors buy the increasingly popular devices.

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration is spending $270 million on these and 45 other research projects to determine the risks of e-cigarettes before millions more Americans become hooked on them. REUTERS

Google rates video stream quality

Google Inc. is rating Internet service providers' video streaming quality on a new website, the latest development in the fight between broadband providers and content companies over who is to blame for slow streaming speeds.

A link to the website appears when videos on Google's streaming service, YouTube, are slow to buffer. The website quietly launched in May, but recently drew growing publicity.

"There are many factors that influence your video streaming quality, including your choice of Internet Service Provider. Learn how your ISP performs and understand your options," the website reads. REUTERS

OMG! New toy allows isolated sick children to play with peers

Dutch student Job Jansweijer wants to give sick children a chance to just be kids. That's why he created KonneKt, a toy that transforms the glass panel used to isolate sick children into a place for playful multi-colored objects, attached by magnets and suction cups that can be used to create games to be played with their peers. "Children, parents, child-care workers and doctors were very positive about it. And many hospitals in different countries have already indicated they would like to have it too," Jansweijer tells Metro.

Two children play with KonneKt in a hospital.
JOB JANSWEIJER

What inspired you to create KonneKt?
For my graduation project, I interviewed child cancer patients. ... I learned that I had been prejudiced about them. ... Instead of focusing on them having cancer, I should focus on them being children. They still want to play and explore. I strongly believe that all children should be able to play with other children, but these children couldn't. I want to change that with KonneKt.

What kind of games they can play?
The kids can play together on opposite sides of the window. They can attach shapes to a window using suction cups and magnets, and by combining these shapes in different ways, the children can build a maze or a jungle, castles and dragons or tropical birds, play existing games such as chess or tic-tac-toe, or variations on Pacman, or anything else they can imagine. KonneKt is designed to trigger the imagination of children.

What are the plans to make the toy available?
[It's expensive.] That's why I will launch a crowdfunding campaign in September. People can buy a game for at home, and the same game is donated to a hospital. If [it] succeeds, I expect the first games to arrive at hospitals in a year from now. WANISE MARTINEZ, METRO WORLD NEWS

Real estate. Hidden costs renters should know before signing

If you're one of the many people hunting for a new apartment right now, there's a lot to consider. Several factors will have you paying more that you might not know about. We got XL Real Property Management CEO Dylan Pichulik to expose these real estate secrets.

Before you head to your broker's office to sign the lease, there's some things you need to know. / COLOURBOX

Higher ceilings. Many apartment hunters covet big windows and high ceilings, but Pichulik says they can be a big money suck. "Apartments with high ceilings require more energy to keep cool in the summer or heat in the winter," he says. People often focus on the monthly rental cost and neglect the potential costs of their utilities bill.

Unexpected tipping. "I don't think a lot of people understand the extent of the costs of tipping doormen, supers and other staff," Pichulik says. The small costs of tipping when someone helps get you a taxi or fixes something for you can add up.

Amenities. Complexes boasting gyms, game rooms and other amenities are popping up all over the city, but according to Pichulik, it's not often listed in the rental ad how much these amenities cost to use. "Ask about additional costs when you are first looking at the apartment, not when you're about to sign the lease," he says.

EMILY LAURENCE

One more tip

Neighborhood costs

Don't just consider the rental cost; know what's in the area, Pichulik recommends. Is the only grocery store a Citarella? Will you be paying more for beer than in your old hood? Consider all the potential costs before making a decision on where to live.

3 Ways to work

I love travelling and have now been to more than 90 countries even as I've been working nearly every day, raking in six or seven figures a year for the past 15 years. I spend a good amount of money on travel, but always make sure to save a good portion of my earnings for retirement and to spend on the next trip! How do I balance my work and travel? Here are three tips:

Use technology to free yourself

WordPress, Skype, WhatsApp and GoToWebinar are just a few of the new technologies I use to manage my business while I travel abroad. You can call me a travel addict because I recognize that you don't have to work from your home office, cubicle or office in just one city or town.

No matter what your profession, use Google to see what kinds of tools are out there to help you do your job and you, too, can earn a steady income from anywhere in the world where there's an Internet connection.

Plan ahead

If you're going to work and make money from locations where 99.9 percent of people there are on a vacation where work is the last thing on their minds, you need to be meticulous or else risk becoming a vacationer too.

Down: Facebook acquired LiveRail, which makes video ads so now we'll start seeing annoying video ads auto-playing all the time. Boooooo!

I always do thorough research ahead of time to make sure my hotel and itinerary allow for plenty of work time on the highest speed Internet possible in every travel destination.

I love beaches and tropical locations, but the Internet can be very slow in places like Turks & Caicos, Bora Bora and the Maldives, so be sure to research hotels and cafes that have the best Internet possible. TripAdvisor has a nice way to search reviews from business travelers.

Invest in proper equipment

Making money while traveling is the dream of many, but to do so you need to be well equipped. Don't bring an old laptop that doesn't utilize the latest technologies and expect to be able to do your work quickly.

Working from crowded cafes or business centers is sometimes unavoidable, so invest in a premium headset with a microphone so you can use Skype to handle calls or play music and not be disturbed by those around you.

Other people will inevitably look at you like you're crazy and encourage you to stop working and go relax, have a drink and swim in the beautiful waters, but don't let them distract you from your goals. You can always take a dip after you've made enough money to pay for some — or all — of the vacation.

Guilty pleasure.
The popular Tumblr gets fictionalized.

Love 'em or hate 'em, you know who they are: Rich Kids of Instagram is a Tumblr that popped up two years ago filled with photos of teens unapologetically flaunting their extreme wealth. Photos of $40,000 shopping sprees, out-of-control yacht parties and champagne bubble baths are just a sampling of what you'll find. Now, in the first Instagram-to-book deal, a novel based on those photos comes out today.

The anonymous creator of the Tumblr enlisted writer Maya Sloan — who ghostwrote Kendall and Kylie Jenner's new YA novel — to write the book, which centers on a Danish royal and his five friends. "The 10 most frequent contributors of the site served as a basic resource of information in the beginning," Sloan says.

Go to Metro.us to see what sparked a photo of pills spelling "F— U."

"The book is completely fiction, but I researched who these teens were, who was hanging out with who and what they were into."

Amazingly, Sloan was able to befriend a real European heir for research, as long as he remained anonymous. She says her husband, who is Danish, also helped provide a lot of insight for the main character.

When writing the book, Sloan's challenge was to humanize the teens so they would be more than just a clique that people laugh at.

"As I got to know people with extreme wealth, I did start to feel for them," she says. "There's a classic money-can't-buy-love thing going on. A lot of these kids are really lonely, feel unloved and are looking for a way to feel validated."

Talking points

1 Colfer back for more 'Glee'

"Glee" fans got a shock last week when star Chris Colfer tweeted that he'd been let go from the show ahead of its final season, but it turns out it was all the work of a hacker. "We've been alerted that Chris Colfer's Twitter account has been hacked. Rumors of his dismissal from 'Glee' could not be further from the truth," a rep for 20th Century Fox TV says in a statement. Colfer wasn't the only cast member to have an account hacked. Lea Michele was surprised when her Twitter account suddenly read, "Before this gets out to the media, I would like to announce to my fans that I am pregnant." Maybe the rest of the cast members should change their passwords.

2 Simpson's dad brings a 'client' to wedding

Joe Simpson showed up at daughter Jessica's wedding last week with 21-year-old Scottish model Jonathan Keith, whom Simpson insists is just a "client" but is rumored to be his lover, according to the National Enquirer. While sources say Simpson revealed his sexuality to his ex-wife and children before filing for divorce in 2012, he's denied any gay rumors as "ridiculous." Hey, gay or straight, it's not cool to bring a "date" to your kid's wedding — especially when your paramour is 12 years younger than the bride.

Miley Cyrus apparently decided to honor her late dog in a very permanent way. She posted photos on Instagram of herself and two friends (one of whom is totally Wayne Coyne of the Flaming Lips) sporting matching tats of a drawn portrait of the pup along with the words "with a little help from my fwends."

Bike here

The Rijksmuseum

Museumstraat 1, 1071 XX Amsterdam
www.rijksmuseum.nl
One of the more than 50 museums and galleries located throughout Amsterdam, the Rijksmuseum reopened in 2012 after an 18-year restoration effort. The Dutch national museum houses more than 1 million objects in its collection, including the Netherlands' national painting, Rembrandt's "The Night Watch." Not to be missed by bikers: the museum's famous underpass, which takes cyclists directly through the museum under ornate vaulting and large windows.

The Dylan Amsterdam

www.dylan amsterdam.com
After a long day of biking around the city, what better way to relax than to treat yourself to The Dylan's five-star accommodations. The Dylan opened in 1999 as the world's first high-end, boutique hotel. Book a night in one of its 40 individually designed rooms, such as one that has been recently renovated by famed Dutch architect Remy Meijers. Then, enjoy High Wine and French cuisine at Vinkele's, the hotel's Michelin star-winning restaurant. A bonus: The Dylan contracts with its own private bike tour guides.

Get on your bike and ride.
The easiest way to experience Amsterdam is in the saddle.

Amsterdam is arguably best known for its red light district and cannabis coffee shops, but the city on the banks of the Amstel River is also home to a lot of bike enthusiasts.

The Dutch as a nation love to bike. Amsterdam has a population of about 750,00 people and an estimated 600,000 bicycles within its city limits. The 250 miles of dedicated bike paths and relatively flat terrain make it ideal for biking. The city's many narrow, one-way streets add to its biking appeal.

Amsterdam's cyclists have a reputation for ignoring traffic rules and riding with little regard for life or limb. Travelers would be wise not to apply "when in Rome" logic here, because cyclists don't have the right of way in traffic. Unless otherwise indicated by traffic signs, the right-before-left rule applies.

Word of warning: Amsterdam has a high rate of bicycle thefts, so it's recommended to secure your bike with two locks to thwart zwijntjessjagers (a centuries-old Dutch term for bike thieves that translates to "piggy hunter").

The Rijksmuseum is one of the many places visitors can bike to in Amsterdam. / GETTY IMAGES

Tips. How to keep your kid's nose in a book this summer

It's officially summer — and if your kids are like most, they're excited to put their books away and focus more on running around outside, watching TV and playing with your iPhone. Reading probably isn't on their mind, so we asked Maggie McGuire, vice president of eScholastic, Parents & Kids Channels for fun, interactive ways to keep kids reading all summer long. McGuire is also one of the creative minds behind the Scholastic Summer Reading Challenge. She shares these tips with parents.

Read outside

"Swing by Governor's Island new Hammock Grove, Riis Beach in Far Rockaway or the new Brooklyn Bridge Park for an outdoor read-aloud," McGuire says. Especially if it's a book about nature, it's fun for kids to be in an outdoor setting.

Go beyond the cover

Many famous kids books are set in places that we walk by every day. After your daughter reads "Eloise," have tea at the Plaza together. "Or you can go to a museum like the Museum of Modern Art and relive 'The Fixed Up Files of Mrs. Basil E. Frankweiler,'" recommends McGuire.

Learn about it later

"After visiting the zoo, have kids learn more about animals with the Discover More series. Or check out a science museum and search for STEM-related titles in the gift shop to keep their curiosity going," says McGuire. EMILY LAURENCE

Don't assign books

Let them choose their own books

Your son or daughter will be more likely to pick up a book to read if it's something he or she picked out and not something you gave them and assigned. McGuire suggests taking a trip to a local community bookstore together where you can not only browse different books, but also check out kids only readings.

With these tips, your child won't want to stop reading. / COLOURBOX

Field Trip

Be a reading role model

If your kids see you reading, they are more likely to read themselves. "Take your child to a book signing for an author you like or go to the library together, where you can read side-by-side," McGuire says.

READING TOGETHER INSPIRES HEALTHY HABITS. / COLOURBOX

Horoscope

♋ Cancer | June 21-July 22. Participating in sporting events or activities with friends will help clear your head and confirm what you should do next.

♌ Leo | July 23-Aug. 22. Clashes with a business or personal partner will leave you questioning the relationship. Rethink your steps and consider the best way to move forward.

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22. Participate in an entertaining event that involves large groups of people. You will have a better time than you anticipate.

♎ Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22. Handle your own financial matters, or you will end up feeling suspicious Assess the reason for any discrepancies that show up.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21. With affairs of the heart, be true to your own. If your lover is committed, he won't try to turn you into someone you're not.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21. You may be dissatisfied with current events, but time is on your side, so be patient. Anyone who is opposing you will eventually see things your way.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb. 18. Consider the consequences of your actions. You will end up facing trouble if you act impulsively. Listen to reason, and you will find a safer way.

♈ Aries | March 21-April 20. Too much worrying can lead to minor health issues. If you are troubled over a recent disagreement with a friend, make amends.

♉ Taurus | April 21-May 21. Plan a getaway that will bring you closer to nature or the beliefs and traditions you honor. Romance is on the rise.

♊ Gemini | May 22-June 20. You should make efforts to work extra hours. If you are industrious, you will grab the attention of someone who can help you.

Can't force people to conform to your values

Re: 'Constitution doesn't protect pursuit of pleasure,' (Metro, July 3-6) To letter writer Justin Dobbs I would reply: History shows that every state which attempts to upgrade the "morality" of its citizens from ordinary human nature to some religious or otherwise unnatural ideal ultimately resorts to using totalitarian means to accomplish this impossible goal. People aren't going to make love the way that you imagine is right for them because birth control is harder — or easier — to obtain!

PHIL BARBER, VIA EMAIL

Method to his madness

Re: 'Calling Kanye West gets expected results' (Metro, July 7) In response to Kanye West's quote during the concert replacing Drake: The obscure mask was to distract you from whose creativity it was coming from. Louie Vuitton is the representation of the ultimate goal of status for the black rapper. Kanye's point was that society will discriminate against the black American before any and all other races. In essence, for this, Kanye is saying "I don't give a damn."

NBA. The Nets introduced their replacement for Jason Kidd Monday.

Hollins was not brought back to Memphis in 2013 despite making the Western Conference finals. / GETTY IMAGES

This summer for the Nets was supposed to be about getting Brook Lopez and Deron Williams back to full health, re-signing Paul Pierce, seeing if Kevin Garnett wants to return and tweaking a 44-win roster.

But on Monday it was instead about introducing Lionel Hollins as the Nets' new head coach and the franchise's fourth since moving from New Jersey following the 2011-2012 season.

Having a press conference to introduce a new head coach was not expected — at least not two weeks ago.

Then Jason Kidd tried to grab more power, ownership denied him and allowed him to leave for Milwaukee. That was followed by stories of rampant dysfunction that described Kidd trying to undermine King, who reportedly wanted to make a coaching change when the team was 10-21 early last season.

"I think the only stabilizing way I can be is just that I'm here and if [the players are] out watching, they know that I'm going to be straight with them," Hollins said. "I'm going to be consistent with them and we're going to have fun. We're going to work hard and we're going to win."

Like Kidd, the perception was Hollins clashed with management in Memphis, where he was fired after the 2013 season.

"It was difficult because it wasn't about coaching at all and it wasn't about analytics," Hollins said. "It wasn't about any of that stuff. The guy in charge wanted to bring somebody else in."

Quoted

"You see a few coaches have gotten more power where they've gotten president and coach. That's not my goal."

SCOTT WAS CANNED A YEAR AFTER MAKING THE FINALS.

ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

Hollins is the seventh head coach since Jason Kidd reportedly forced Byron Scott out in 2004.

- Lawrence Frank (2004-2009): The most-enduring of the recent coaches, Frank was 225-241 in his tenure. He made the playoffs four times, including the 2004 season, but never went farther than the Eastern Conference semifinals.
- Tom Barrise (2009): The veteran assistant coached just two games after Frank was fired.

VANDEWEGHE PLANNED TO HIRE DEL HARRIS.

- Kiki Vandeweghe (2009-10): The former Knicks forward and Nets general manager finished out the 2009-10 season with a miserable 12-52 record. He was not retained by Mikhail Prokhorov.
- Avery Johnson (2010-12): Prokhorov's first hire led the Nets through two awful seasons (46-102) before being fired.

THE NETS' GAME 7 LOSS TO CHICAGO PROBABLY DOOMED CARLESIMO.

- P.J. Carlesimo (2012-13): The former Seton Hall coach took over on an interim basis from Johnson and led the team to a 35-19 record. But they bombed out in the first round of the playoffs.
- Jason Kidd (2013-14): The circle was complete with Kidd's one-and-done season in Brooklyn.

Band back together

Rambis joins Fisher on Knicks bench

The Knicks picked their top assistant for new coach Derek Fisher on Monday and it was a surprise to no one.

Kurt Rambis, who was a longtime assistant of new president Phil Jackson and coached Fisher in Los Angeles, will join his former protege on the bench.

"Kurt is exactly the type of person we want in our organization to help develop our culture of success," Fisher said in a statement.

Rambis was a candidate for the head coaching job. He was briefly at the helm in Minnesota. METRO

Brazil down key players as they meet Germany

World Cup. A match between two soccer powers, Tuesday's semifinal will be missing serious star power.

For full World Cup coverage, visit Metro.us/world-cup.

It's the penultimate round in the biggest sporting event in the world, and the final four are slated to battle Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons. Two soccer powers will duel in the first match at 4 p.m. Tuesday on ESPN, with host country Brazil facing Germany.

It seems that everything has fallen into place for the Germans to prevail, with suspensions and injuries creating an even playing field. Many members of each squad are teammates, or rivals during the regular season in Europe, so there is no lack of familiarity between these two squads.

Historically, Brazil owns a 12-4-5 advantage over Germany in 21 games. The only other time they played in the World Cup was the 2002 final, a 2-0 victory for the South Americans.

If these two were slated to play when the World Cup began in the group stage, it would be a clear Brazil advantage. But Neymar, who suffered a fractured vertebra in Brazil's 2-1 victory over Colombia, is out at least three weeks.

"There are two games left and I am sure that my teammates will do everything possible so that my dream, which is to be a champion, comes true," Neymar told Brazil's website.

Also their captain, Thiago Silva, was given a second yellow card against Colombia, meaning he won't be able to play Tuesday.

Germany couldn't have written a better script.

Bastian Schweinsteiger won't have to deal with Thiago Silva on the Brazil defense.

Different styles

Germans put successful passes to test

It's a tale of two different approaches in Tuesday's World Cup semifinal between Brazil and Germany.

The Germans move the ball extremely well. The team has played 500 more successful passes than anyone else in the competition.

Marcelo and Brazil's defense will have their hands full.

The two styles of play couldn't be more different. Germany plays fundamental, ball-control soccer, while Brazil tries to win at all costs.

"I am all for hard, clean challenges, but there were one or two tackles which were over the limit," Germany's Bastian Schweinsteiger told the media Sunday. EVAN MACY
